

Omstella

Expanding working life

We create a successful and sustainable working life for white-collar worker in the cooperative sector, civil society, and non-governmental organisations. We are neutral and work with transition and skills development based on each business's and person's unique situation and needs.

Employer

We support managers before, during and after a transition. With a deeper understanding of how the transition process works, it becomes more secure for everyone involved. Through our management training, we provide knowledge, practical tools and training to facilitate the dialogue with employees in connection with transition.

Trade union representative

We support union representatives both before, during and after a transition. Sitting in two chairs at the same time is not always easy. To clarify how the role of a union representative can relate to the different situations can be helpful during a transition. With a deeper understanding of how the transition works, it will be better and feel safer for everyone.

White-collar workers

Omstella supports both white-collar workers in redundancy and white-collar workers in employment.

› White-collar workers in redundancy

Being laid off can be associated with concern, but often also means new interesting opportunities. We provide support in your transition towards your new goal, regardless of whether you want to study. For those who have been made redundant, we offer transition support in the form of expert guidance, study and career advice, and financial support. We also have extended support for people with health issues.

› White-collar workers in employment

Today, it is important to be competitive in the jobmarket. We offer skills support both to white-collar employees who want to develop in their current professional field and to white-collar employees who want or need to change their professional direction completely. The support includes expert guidance, study and career advice as well as financial support. The goal is always to strengthen the individual's position in the job market.

About Omstella

We are specialists in transition and skills development for redundant white-collar employees and employees in employment. We are there to support organisations in civil society, cooperative enterprises, and the non-profit sector. For us, it is important that our affiliated organisations, their employees, and union representatives have the right conditions to carry out a successful transition process. We are neutral and our work is based on each person's unique situation and needs. Omstella is a non-profit foundation that was founded in 2023 by Fremia and PTK.
